EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

What this assessment covers

AXA Health covers 3.5 million members across personal, corporate and international plans. Despite the scale, member onboarding, mental health pathway management and corporate client engagement are largely manual processes. Competitors including Bupa and Vitality have invested heavily in AI-driven member experience — AXA Health's gap is measurable and widening.

GAP ANALYSIS

Three gaps with measurable financial impact

Mental health pathway is a reputational risk

AXA Health's fastest-growing claims category is mental health. The pathway from member self-referral to first therapy session involves multiple manual handoffs — typically taking 5-10 working days. An AI triage layer that responds in under 60 seconds and routes to the right pathway immediately is both a member welfare and underwriting priority.

Corporate client reporting is manual

AXA Health's corporate clients — FTSE 100 firms, government bodies, large employers — receive health utilisation reports compiled manually by account managers. No live dashboard, no AI-driven insight, no proactive health risk flagging. This is a significant competitive disadvantage against Bupa's corporate offering.

24%

of AXA Health corporate clients who don't renew —

International member activation

AXA Health's international and expat members receive a policy document and a helpline number. No AI-driven onboarding sequence, no benefit activation prompts, no local clinic connection for members based outside the UK. This results in low benefit utilisation and high lapse rates among international policyholders.

58%

of international AXA Health members who never activate their full benefit entitlement in year one
