EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

What this assessment covers

Towergate Health & Protection is the UK's largest specialist health and protection insurance broker, advising over 100,000 businesses on their employee benefits strategy. The advisory model is relationship-driven but the operational layer — client onboarding, renewal management, claims support and employee communications — remains heavily manual, creating a scalability constraint as the business grows.

GAP ANALYSIS

Three gaps with measurable financial impact

Renewal management is a manual bottleneck

With over 100,000 client businesses, renewal season creates a significant operational bottleneck. Account managers manually prepare renewal packs, chase insurers for terms, compare quotes and communicate outcomes to clients. An AI layer that automates renewal data gathering, comparison and client communication would transform capacity without headcount growth.

Employee benefits communication gap

Towergate's corporate clients pay for employee benefits that their workforce doesn't understand or use. No AI-powered employee communication layer exists to explain benefits, handle queries and drive utilisation — leaving clients questioning the ROI of their spend and creating churn risk at renewal.

Claims support is reactive

When employees make health claims, Towergate's support is largely reactive — responding to calls rather than proactively guiding claimants through the process. An AI that initiates contact at claim trigger points, explains next steps and tracks claim progress would dramatically improve client satisfaction
